Forecast for Sunday 20 Jun 2021

Weather: A cloudy, but generally bright start to the day with the chance of a shower. A more definite area of rain will spread southeast during the afternoon affecting western ranges first, but most areas wet by the evening. Rain continuing through the evening period.

Chance of cloud free mountain/hill tops above 800m: 50%, broken low cloud in the west for most of the morning, better conditions for eastern ranges and the southern Cairngorms, perhaps the summits will be clear for Glen Clova, more low cloud is likely to build during the afternoon.

Visibility: Generally good visibility below any low cloud, perhaps moderate in rainfall in the afternoon. Low cloud will be broken from 500m and above in the west, more scattered from 700m and above in the east.
